

The Center for English Language and American Culture (CELAC) is UNM's intensive English program for international students. We are currently hiring instructors for our upcoming academic term.

Candidates may be currently enrolled in a graduate degree program at UNM and should have ESL/EFL teaching experience, preferably at the college or university level. Classes meet Monday through Saturday during morning, afternoon, and evening hours, depending on the assignment.

If you would like to teach English at CELAC, please email a cover letter and a current resume detailing your English teaching experience and interest in the position. Please send your materials to Mr. Bart Hill, Supervisor of International Education (bahill82@unm.edu). You may request additional information regarding English teaching opportunities at CELAC via the same address.

CELAC is housed in the Global Education Office, located in Mesa Vista Hall of UNM's main campus. For more information, please visit our website at celac.unm.edu
