SOCIAL POLICY RESEARCH ASSISTANT

UNM’s Cradle to Career Policy Institute (ccpi.unm.edu) is seeking a research assistant for a multiyear federally-funded mixed methods project seeking to understand how state child care access policies support family stability in New Mexico. We welcome applications from students pursuing advanced degrees in the social sciences, education, or related fields, who have relevant training and experience, interest in working with a research team, and strong interest in public policy.

QUALIFICATIONS

1) Enrolled in a graduate program in the social sciences, education or related field of study. Preference will be given to advanced students (those who have completed graduate coursework.)
2) Training and/or experience in qualitative methods and coding.
3) Available to periodically conduct in-state field work (involves overnight travel.)
4) Strong writing skills.
5) Training and/or experience in quantitative methods (preferred, but not required.)
6) Spanish language fluency (preferred, but not required.)

Pay will be $15-18/hr., depending on graduate program status, with a commitment of at least 20 hours/week preferred. Tuition and health insurance support is available.

TO APPLY:

Please send a cover letter, resume and three references to: belld@unm.edu. The position is open until filled.
